

158V4X

Print Request: Selected Items (2)

Time of Request: Sunday, July 20, 2014 20:46:12

Job Number: 1825:472674274

Client ID/Project Name:

Research Information:

Selected Documents, The Walt Disney Company

Regarding:

Sent by:

Send to: ACADUNIV, 158V4X
FULL SAIL UNIVERSITY
3300 UNIVERSITY BLVD
WINTER PARK, FL 32792-7435

LexisNexis® Company Dossier - The Walt Disney Company

Table of Contents

LexisNexis® Company Dossier - The Walt Disney Company Batch Delivery Request Report
Selected Documents: 2
Date of Request: 7/20/14

	Document	Full-Text Request
1	Netflix to offer Disney movies to subscribers in Canada	Completed
2	Netflix, Disney in Canada pay-TV pact	Completed

Key:

Completed - Full-text retrieved and delivered below.
Error - Full-text could not be retrieved and/or delivered.

5 of 99 DOCUMENTS

The Gazette (Montreal)

July 18, 2014 Friday
Early Edition

Netflix to offer Disney movies to subscribers in Canada

SECTION: BUSINESS; Pg. A17

LENGTH: 190 words

DATELINE: TORONTO

Disney titles are coming to Netflix Canada starting next year.

Netflix Inc. and Walt Disney Studios announced a multiyear exclusive licensing deal Thursday that will bring first-run Disney live-action and animated films to the popular streaming service.

Starting in mid-2015, Netflix Canada subscribers will be able to watch new movies from Disney's live action division, Walt Disney Animation Studios, Pixar Animation Studios, Marvel Studios, Lucasfilm, DisneyNature and DreamWorks Studios about eight months after the titles leave the theatre.

That means upcoming titles like Finding Nemo sequel Finding Dory and 101 Dalmatians live-action spinoff Descendants will likely land on Netflix.

Disney most recently licensed the pay-TV broadcast rights for its productions, including Frozen, The Avengers, Brave and The Muppets, to Corus Entertainment, which aired them on The Movie Network and Movie Central channels.

Netflix launched a Canadian service in 2010 and is home to popular TV series such as House of Cards and Orange Is the New Black, as well as a wide variety of films.

The company has about 48 million members in more than 40 countries.

LOAD-DATE: July 18, 2014

LANGUAGE: ENGLISH

GRAPHIC: DISNEY; Disney's animated film Finding Nemo will be among the movies available on Netflix in Canada starting in mid-2015.;

DOCUMENT-TYPE: News

PUBLICATION-TYPE: Newspaper

1 of 100 DOCUMENTS

Screen International

July 18, 2014 Friday

Netflix, Disney in Canada pay-TV pact

LENGTH: 309 words

Netflix has struck a multi-year licensing deal with The Walt Disney Studios making it the exclusive Canadian subscription TV service for first-run Disney live-action and animated features.

Under the deal that starts with 2015 theatrical releases, films will be made available to Netflix subscribers approximately eight months after they leave theatres.

The deal covers Disney live-action, Walt Disney Animation Studios, Pixar Animation Studios, Marvel Studios, Lucasfilm, DisneyNature and DreamWorks Studios titles.

"We are delighted to be the new pay-TV home in Canada for the world's highest-quality, most imaginative and entertaining films," said Netflix chief content officer Ted Sarandos (pictured). "Canadians of all ages will have an incredible range of great stories and characters to look forward to."

"We are absolutely thrilled that Canadian Netflix subscribers will be able to experience Disney's premium films in the pay TV window," said Dan Cohen, evp of pay television and digital, Disney-ABC Domestic Television.

"Netflix continues to be a highly valued partner on a global scale and we couldn't be more pleased to extend our great relationship with this exciting new agreement."

- XLrator Media has picked up North American rights to first-time director Scott Schirmer's horror film Found. Gavin Brown and Ethan Philbeck star in the story of a fifth grader whose older brother is a serial killer. XLrator Media negotiated the rights with The October People and will release the film on August 15 theatrically, on VOD and iTunes through its Macabre genre label.
- monterey media has taken all North American rights to the comedy Two-Bit Waltz created by and starring Clara Mamet alongside Jared Gilman, David Paymer and William H Macy in a deal with ICM Partners. monterey media plans an autumn theatrical release.

jeremykay67@gmail.com (Jeremy Kay)

LOAD-DATE: July 18, 2014LANGUAGE: ENGLISHPUBLICATION-TYPE: MagazineJOURNAL-CODE: Screen