

Objectives:

- Communicate information using a variety of digital technologies.
- Create information using a variety of digital technologies.

Earlier this week, you read “Digital Natives, Digital Immigrants” by Marc Prensky. This publication was written in 2001. Have learners changed since 2001?

To quote Marc Prensky, “What should we call these “new” students of today?”

For this activity, you will coin your own term and share your personal vision of your digital identity and the characteristics associated with it. Using tools familiar to you and the publication as a guide, create your vision of the type of Full Sail student you are or the type this new learning community may be.

Some students may choose to create a graffiti wall of words and their own images in Photoshop; some may choose to create a collage of photos they have taken (do not use pictures from other sources); and others may choose to record a short song in Garageband. Be creative!

Once you have created your vision, share it on the discussion board in FSO and provide a brief explanation before the next class block. Start conversations about your classmates’ visions. Ask them questions. Engage with each other. Have fun.

Requirements:

- Share your vision (image, audio or video) and explanation on the discussion board before the next class block.

See Frequently Asked Questions (FAQ) sheet for more information.
